News in Brief

Grossman Guilty on All Counts

The trial of Rebecca Grossman ended last Friday with the jury finding the defendant guilty on all counts against her. Grossman was charged in the murder of Mark and Jacob Iskander, killed when her car struck them in a Westlake Village crosswalk in 2020. Grossman was charged with two counts each of murder and vehicular manslaughter with gross negligence and one felony count of hit-and-run driving resulting in death. Sentencing is set for April 10. Grossman could face up to 34 years to life in prison. Mother of the two boys, Nancy Iskander, said, "Mark and Jacob did not die, they were murdered." But she also added she felt for Grosssman, saying, "I don't have any hate for her. My heart broke for her children," Nancy Iskander said. "I'm a mother."

Students Walk Out at El Camino High Over Antisemitism

Students staged a walk out Tuesday at El Camino Charter High School over alleged antisemitic incidents. Many carried Israeli flags and chanted "Stop the hate" or "Stand Against Antisemitism." What sparked the protest was one student being called a "dirty Jew" and being punched in the neck and back. The girl said her teacher was on the phone and didn't realize what was happening until she left the classroom crying. The school's Executive Director David Hussey said the school does stress an anti-hate message to students. "One is addressing the issues, maybe some students don't know what they're saying and what the impacts are. So it's educating these students, and then reassuring the other students that they're safe at school," he told reporters. The victim's father said that the school is not calling the incident a hate crime and that instead of taking disciplinary action against his daughter's alleged attacker they moved him to a different seat. "The school thinks that he has more rights than my daughter for protection. He has rights to be educated, but my daughter doesn't have the rights for her safety," said Edan Eshee.

Turn Your Clocks! Daylight Saving Time Starts March 10

Despite the recent onslaught of rain, it's almost time to "spring forward!" Daylight Saving Time will go into effect on Sunday, March 10, at 2 am. While the time change will mean we "lose" an hour of sleep, sunset will be an hour later, leading to longer and brighter days. Later this year, Daylight Saving Time will end on Sunday, November 3.

Honoring Those Who Fight Against Hate

We see it in the news every day. Stories of brutality, incidents motivated by religious or racial bias, hate crimes. How to confront it?

The David Labkovski Project (DLP), based in West Hills, is a non profit which seeks to combat antisemitism by teaching students about the Holocaust through art. Over the years they have reached over 5,000 students with their programs.

The project's unique educational program, fusing history and art, is based on the life and art of renowned artist, David Labkovski (1906-1991). By engaging viewers with his paintings and sketches, the David Labkovski Project shares lessons of life, survival, tolerance, acceptance, and the importance of bearing witness to history.

The DLP uses the body of over 400 pieces of artwork created in pencil, acrylic, and gouache to educate about life before, during, and after the Holocaust.

At the Project's 8th Annual Scholar's Event on March 17 at Skirball Center, they will honor Angelenos for, as founder Leora Raikin says, "their leadership and bravery in confronting a world in which increased antisemitism and hatred exists."

The DLP's 2024 Legacy of Hope Honoree, Avlyn Kotton is a Board-Certified Educational Therapist and the director of the Kotton Educational Therapy Center in Malibu where she works with students who have learning differences. Avlyn has been a board member of the David Labkovski Project since its inception in 2015 and is committed to its mission of advancing knowledge about the Holocaust through the use of the artwork of Holocaust survivor David Labkovski.

• As wordsmiths we love the eccentricities of the English language! We all know a group of crows is called a murder, but did you know these collective names for animals:

- a tuxedo of penguins
- a bask of crocodiles
- a destruction of cats
- a tower of giraffes
- a parliament of owls
- a cackle of hyenas
- a wisdom of wombats

• In following the animal theme, it's been said that dogs prepare you for children while cats prepare you for teenagers!

• Here's one to throw out at trivia. Do you know the 16th century word "quafftide?" It's a one word announcement that it's time for a drink. Break that one out on Friday night!

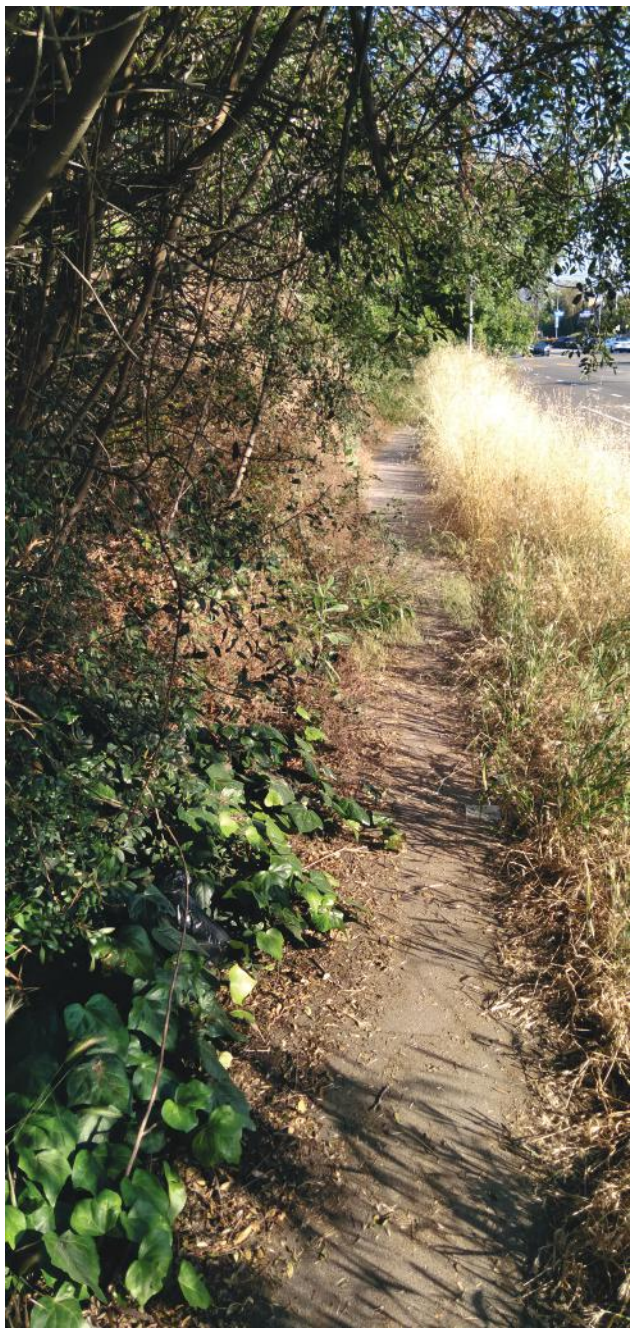
Letter to the Editor:

Homeowners - Your Parkway, Your Weeds, Your Responsibility!

While the rain is still falling and the green shoots of Spring have begun to appear, it is the right time to formulate a plan to remove the expected weeds.



It is simple for most homeowners to identify and eliminate weeds from their property. However, some are unaware their obligation to clean their property extends to the parkway over their back fence. Here is a news flash: the City of Los Angeles is NOT responsible for cleaning up private property. That obligation falls on the homeowner. The homeowners' obligation extends to their parkway behind the sound wall adjacent to your home.

Don't take my word for it. The City of Los Angeles says that where an owner's sidewalk and parkway conditions are a nuisance or safety hazard to the public, the City reserves the right to remove the offending (conditions) and restore the parkway area using City forces. The property owner is responsible for reimbursing the City for all costs incurred. (https://streetsla.lacity.org/sites/default/files/Parkway%20Landscaping%20Guidelines.pdf).

Dozens of your neighbors have volunteered their time over the past several years to clean their parkways along Sale Avenue, Valley Circle, and Platt Avenue. It is time that all homeowners take responsibility for their property.

It is unfair that while most Woodland Hills residents clean up their property, some do not. They pull down the perception of the neighborhood. Remember, if the City of LA cleans your property, it will come with a bill. Now that you know that you must remove weeds from your property, when and how you will remove the weeds is up to you. What happened to my favorite Saturday and Sunday West Valley outdoor Santa Maria BBQ Pit?

For many years, the West San Fernando Valley was the home to an outdoor BBQ Pit located at Jim's Market on Fallbrook Ave south of Victory Blvd. When a neighbor complained about the weekend smoke generated from the BBQ, the matter ended up in court. The BBQ cooking location ultimately ended up at El Camino High School where the food was cooked then transported back to Jim's Market where it was sold to hungry BBQ fans. Eventually the BBQ cooking location at the school was shut down and the delicious weekend BBQ had no place to operate and was put out of business.

As the saying goes, one bad turn sometimes turns into a good one. The good turn of the wandering BBQ Pit is that a new permanent home has been found for the Pit!

Bass and Blumenfield Bank on Sacramento

Los Angeles City Councilman Bob Blumenfield was part of a delegation led by Mayor Karen Bass to Sacramento this week to meet with state representatives on behalf of the City of Los Angeles.

The goal of the meetings, Blumenfield told Valley News Group, was "not transactional. We weren't planning on coming up and walking out with a check," he said. "It was more planting the seed that our voices were heard."

This is the first time leadership in Sacramento doesn't have a Los Angeles or Southern California representative, Blumenfield noted, so it was important that they hear directly from the L.A. contingent.

"It was interesting coming back to Sacramento where I used to work. The mayor was a former speaker, Krekorian was a former Assembly member, as was I. As former budget chair during difficult times I have a unique perspective. I know how it works and am in a good position to make our case," he explained.

"This was an opening dialogue with Sacramento - making sure they understand some of our concerns. In particular we're very worried about the governor's proposal for homeless funding and budget cuts. We pushed to make sure that those cuts have the least impact on Angelenos as possible."

Though the trip was billed as a meet and greet, the team connected with the Director of the Office of Emergency Service, Nancy Ward, reimbursements approved and released by the federal government. That money goes first to the state and then is distributed.

Much of that money will go to reimbursements for Project Roomkey. Other funding will be applied to storm relief and homelessness.

Mayor Bass stated that "We must continue to do all we can to join forces at every level of government to save lives and bring Angelenos inside. I want to thank the governor for continuing his work to lock arms with us to deliver for the people of Los Angeles."

Is the California State budget really running short of funds and is another recall underway for Governor Newsom who many speculate wants to run for President of the United States?

The California State Budget is somewhere in the vicinity of $7,000,000,000 plus short of needed revenues for the coming fiscal year that begins on July 1. It may be less when you discuss the matter with some of the Sacramento officials who spend our hard-earned taxes like it does not matter how and what they spend the money on. How does California go from a huge budget surplus to a deficit in such a short time? Is it fiscal responsibility or fiscal squandering?

It is simple. The people we elect to political office often spend more than the revenues generated from the hard-working California taxpayers. What do state elected officials and the governor do when money runs out? They increase our TAXES and FEES to make up the money they need to travel to lands far away for conferences and a host of other missions of alleged good will. Why did Governor Newsom and his delegation need to travel to Hong Kong and China? Remember that when elected officials travel, all expenses are paid for by us the taxpayers. There are many ways the funds can be masked like charging it to a specific department within the government. For example, locally charge it to the DWP, airport, harbor or a host of other taxpayer-funded departments of the government. More detail on this matter as we approach July and the new fiscal year.

March 5th is election day. I urge you to remember to VOTE. Your VOTE does count. When you VOTE, you can complain. When you sit out the election, your complaining goes nowhere. Be a part of the solution to the many problems we are experiencing in our city, state and nation.

Reseda Street Race Ends in Death

It seems to have taken over almost everywhere in the Valley: street racing.

This past Sunday, firefighters were called to 18153 W. Vanowen Street in Reseda after reports of a multi-vehicle crash that was likely caused by the dangerous trend of street racing. According to the LAPD, a white Dodge Charger and a yellow Chevrolet Camaro were speeding down the eastbound lanes of Vanowen St., collided with each other, lost control and crashed into multiple vehicles in their vicinity.

The driver of the Camaro, a 32-year-old male, died on the scene after being trapped in the vehicle and the driver of the Dodge, 21-year-old Nicolas Velasco Marcos, was arrested on scene and booked for murder.

Five other individuals were rushed to the hospital after being rescued by the jaws of life from their vehicles.

Women in Leadership: Growth Through Representation

By Stacey McKinnon

The elevation of women in leadership roles continues to drive the shift towards inclusivity and diversity in the service sector. The momentum towards gender equality is palpable with the industry gradually moving away from its historical "boys' club" mentality, as evidenced in the presence of women at industry events in recent years.

At a prominent financial services event in 2018, the stark contrast in numbers between male and female attendees underscored gender disparity within the industry. The presence of women in executive positions in advisory firms was notably scarce. However, the women present at that event - seeing the imbalance - persisted, determined to shift the narrative through representation. Their persistence paid off as the leadership landscape slowly but surely began to change. By 2019, at another industry event, the audience composition shifted, with a considerable increase in female leadership from Operations Managers to Chief Operating Officers. Despite the progress, the questions posed to the speakers after their presentations centered on gender-based respect, challenging stereotypes, and the struggle to get women's ideas acknowledged within their companies and organizations.

The transformation of this industry's leadership landscape in the ensuing years was made possible by the steadfast efforts of women leaders who walked on stage after stage, sharing their perspectives and experiences at conferences and on social media platforms. These industry consultants and female leaders played crucial roles, creating opportunities for women to not only express themselves in this space, but also to advocate for change.

In our local community, we see these shifts happening each day. Chief Operating Officers are shattering the glass ceiling of "glorified secretary," demonstrating the profound impact and authority women can wield in leadership positions beyond traditional administrative roles. Founders of women-led firms like Janice L. Miller, Miri Rossitto, or Jerri Hemmsworth exemplify the shift towards a leadership model rooted in humility, authenticity, and purpose. Their journeys serve as inspiring narratives of resilience and leadership diversity.

Over the past few years, we have also seen the evolution of groups like "Women Founders Network" that opens the doors for more female-led firms in the future. Schools, like Granada Hills Charter High School, have launched "Women In Business" programs to teach young ladies how to evaluate themselves and approach the workforce with more confidence and experience.

Leadership driven by compassion, empathy, and care are increasingly recognized as strengths, challenging traditional notions of aggressive and autocratic leadership styles.

Despite these achievements and milestones, women still represent the minority in leadership roles within most industries. But the change to push past these barriers continues to move forward and gain momentum. There is so much to be gained from equal representation including lessons from female leaders who paved the way.

Leadership driven by compassion, empathy, and care are increasingly recognized as strengths, challenging traditional notions of aggressive and autocratic leadership styles.

Adapting and embracing diversity of thought enriches the decision-making process, leading to more creative, thoughtful, and innovative strategies and outcomes.

Diminishing the stereotype of women as primarily suited for administrative roles only fosters a more inclusive and equitable professional environment.

As the service industry continues to evolve, the emphasis on gender equality, diversity, and inclusion promises a more dynamic and responsive industry capable of meeting the needs of its clientele. Though much has been achieved in almost a half a decade, the journey towards increasing representation through elevating women's leadership roles is still an ongoing process, with trailblazing women paving the way for future generations.

The Mulholland: Thoroughly Modern Cuisine With a Nod to Calabasas' Past

By Kathleen Sterling

Mixing modern touches with nostalgic nods to Calabasas' cowboy past, The Mulholland is the newest must-visit eatery on the restaurant scene. Located in the heart of Old Town, even the name is a tribute to the iconic highway that ends here. While having recently opened their doors, The Mulholland is the creation of the Rosensen family, who have owned the property since its early days as an art gallery and wine store. It's clear from both the familial component and the themes prevalent in the restaurant itself, The Mulholland shines thanks to its ability to blend present trends while recognizing the importance of honoring the past.

Wine and hospitality are in their blood, as the family owns the Coquelicot Vineyard and several stellar restaurants in California, including First & Oak in Solvang, the Chateau du Sureau and the Elderberry House in Oakhust, a Relais & Chateaux recognized property.

The intimate interior is done up in black and white, with an impressive cellar that stands as the centerpiece of the room. One could easily think they're dining somewhere on the Westside if it weren't for the dining room wall artistically decorated with prints and memorabilia reflecting Calabasas' history and the "last of the old west." Eagle-eyed observers might even make a connection between the selected prints and the amusingly named cocktails.

Even the free-standing bathrooms in the back are set in what was once the first Calabasas schoolmarm's home - and the original Calabasas Enterprise newspaper's old offices, wallpapered with a chic cowboy print.

The menu is thoroughly modern, however, with a list rich in flavor and texture set in four distinct sections; raw bar, breads and spreads, appetizers and entrees.

The appetizers shine here

The Mulholland on Calabasas Road is the newest entrée on the dining scene.

- from the ricotta gnudi with creamed kale, roasted onion and black garlic - which was rich and smoky - to the tempura mushrooms which were crispy with a kick.

We could have made a meal of just the crab salad with baby iceberg leaves, served on ice and incredibly fresh. The hamachi crudo with citrus, olive oil and yuzu was another favorite, again served on ice with a beautiful presentation that elevated the dish from appetizer to art. You could truly dine on just the apps, with a few glasses of wine from their full bar, which features 12 of their own Coquelicot wines, but also a full complement of spirits and non-alcoholic creations.

If you're looking for a more carb-heavy start, their homemade rosemary focaccia bread with sea salt is so good you have to be careful not to fill up on that first! On offer with three different side options ("pizza" butter being the fan favorite), the salty savory bread is just as delicious alone as it is with its respective dips.

The creative menu from Culinary Director Chef Chris Flint (Eleven Madison Park, NoMad) and Chef de Cuisine Michele Carter (Barbara Lynch Collective) offers seasonal, local and organic ingredients with the menu intending to slightly change to reflect the best ingredients available.

Currently, there are six entrees on the menu, but they offer a variety of choices to delight any carnivore, veggie or pescatarian. The Petaluma chicken with mushrooms came on a delicious, creamy potato puree that was worth eating in and of itself. The sautéed scallops were served with a carrot curry on forbidden rice with Thai basil.

There is also a seared king salmon, cheeseburger and dry aged striplion served with fresh horseradish and Bordelaise. A charred cabbage is served with apple, farro and rosemary.

There is plenty of seating inside, and the large bar is a gathering spot to grab a drink with friends after work or a dimly-lit date night spot.

Bar Director Chad Austin and Sommelier/Operating Partner Jonathan Rosenson have designed cocktails and mocktails that are playful spins on the classics and cheekily named. After all, living locally, how could you not order the Valley Girl?!

The wine list is organic and off the beaten path, and as I've said, features many of their own Coquelicot wines. Wine connoisseurs will no doubt be pleased with their choices and those looking for guidance will be happily steered to something that pleases their palate.

The large patio behind the restaurant features a fireplace and more seating in a garden setting - a perfect spot for parties and events. With this space, and the restaurant as a whole, the owners hope to "cultivate community by providing a gathering

POPS the Club: Inspiring Local Students Whose Parents Are Imprisoned

By Danielle Roy

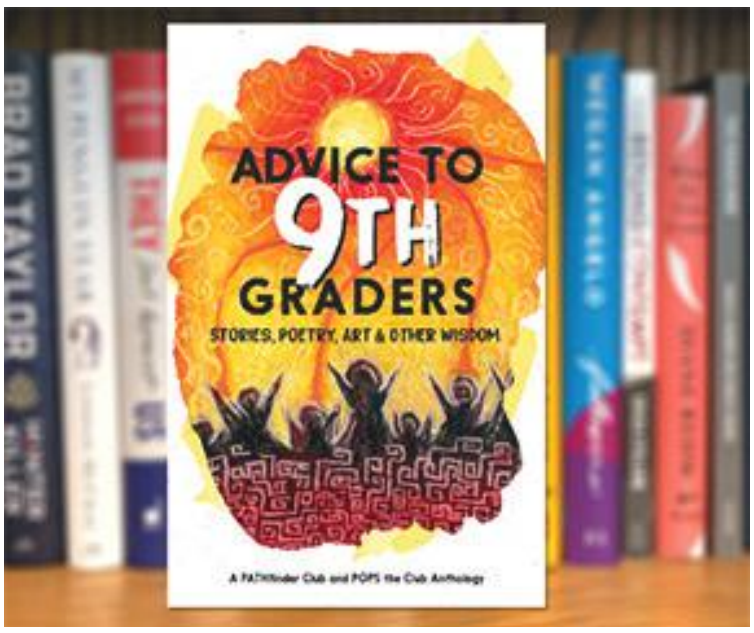
"We are only as sick as our secrets," Amy Friedman states while sharing how her personal experience as a mother to two daughters whose father was in prison inspired her to start POPS the Club in 2013.

The first 10th grader to join was soon followed by another 10th grade girl. Although the girls had been close friends since kindergarten, the only secret they did not know was that both fathers were in prison.

Statistics report that one in 14 children has a parent behind bars. POPS stands for "pain of the prison" system, yet POPS is a joyful, happy place free of judgement. Part of the mission, along with introducing several modalities of art as healing, is for professionally designed books to be published every year. Advice to 9th Graders will launch its ninth book this week.

El Camino High School teacher James DeLarme was an early adopter. He first heard about POPS through his wife, and presented the concept to El Camino administration, then promoted the club in flyers, classes, and with colleagues. The first club started with around five students and his club now has over 30 members.

El Camino High Junior Rachael Galper heard about POPS when she was looking for support. She fell in love with the welcoming community. She feels many young girls cannot see their own beauty because they want others to like them, so they try to look like everyone else. Galper has a piece featured in Advice to 9th Graders which is a self-portrait highlighting self-image issues she has experienced and her own struggles to fit in.



Kimberly Romero, another El Camino High Junior, has several pieces featured in Advice to 9th Graders. She was inspired to join POPS by her AP World History teacher and her first day at POPS was a writing activity that became a healing part of her journey to sobriety. Romero notes that she did not know she was struggling at the time, but the experience helped her to release and pause. She is proud to be in a published book.

POPS the Club has grown to 16 clubs in four states and is now part of The Pathfinder Network. All clubs are led by volunteers and welcome guest speakers. *Advice to 9th Grader*s, featuring local POPS students, will launch on March 2, 2024, at the Downtown Public Library in the Teen Room. Student readings will commence at 2 pm. The public, and especially teenagers affected by incarceration, detention, or deportation, are invited to attend. Learn more at www.popsclubs.org.

educating and engaging audiences in creating awareness of the dangers of antisemitism while educating about Jewish history and the Holocaust through David Labkovski Project.

Dr. Marilyn Harran from Chapman University is being honored with the Leadership in Holocaust Education Award. Harran is professor of Religious Studies and of History, holder of the Stern Chair in Holocaust Education, and the founding director of the Rodgers Center for Holocaust Education and the Sala and Aron Samueli Holocaust Memorial Library at Chapman University. Dr. Harran has worked with administrators, colleagues, and supporters to establish a multi-faceted program in Holocaust history and education with academic minor, distinguished lecture series, an archive containing the world's largest collection of materials on rescuer Oskar Schindler, and community outreach, including a Holocaust Art and Writing Contest that each year engages some 7,000 middle and high school students in more than 32 states and 10 countries.

The Ellie Lainer Youth Leadership in Holocaust Education is being awarded to students Sophie Small from De Toledo High School and Katia Lysobey from Moorpark High School who have been involved in bringing the DLP program to their peers and community.

"These honorees are exceptionally worthy of being recognized," shared Raikin. "They understand the DLP's unique approach to educating and that through Labkovski's artwork, history becomes accessible not through statistics but through one person's lens of what it was like to live through difficult times."

At this year's annual DLP Scholar's Event March 17 at the Skirball, the exhibit "Documenting History through Art" will be featured and guided by DLP student docents. There will also be a screening of the Telly Award winning film Healing through Art, produced by Darryl Pugh and sponsored by Capital Group. They will be recognized at the event for their leadership and bravery in confronting a world in which increased antisemitism and hatred exists.

Tickets for the event are $180 per person and are on sale at davidlabkovskiproject.org Sponsorships and tributes are still available. For information call Debra Levine at (818) 271-1307.

And many of their friends and family stop by, as mom Cynthia Rosenson still lives in Calabasas, and the three siblings who run the restaurant, Jonathan, Elissa and Candice, all grew up in the area.

The theme they all espouse is "Call Again," a tribute to Cynthia's father, a barber in Brooklyn who in broken English always reminded his customers to "call again."

And call again we will… to grab a drink at the bar, relax on the patio, and dine on the creative repast.

It's Coyote Mating Season - Be Aware!

We just celebrated Valentine's Day, but be aware that the season of love for coyotes runs January through March, and the animals are on the prowl looking for a mate.

Male coyotes can become louder, howl more and become more aggressive during this time of year. Coyotes are attracted to and can mate with unspayed or unneutered domestic dogs. Unspayed female dogs in season can attract male coyotes, and unneutered male dogs can be lured away by the scent of a female coyote in her ovulation cycle. Additionally, male dogs can be lured by the female coyote's scent and killed by male coyotes.

Know that clever coyotes learn the daily schedules of people and their pets. If you let your dog out every evening at the same time, chances are a coyote may be well aware of your routine.

Cautionary tips year round, but especially during mating season:

-Never feed coyotes as that lures them into the neighborhood.

- If you have a bird feeder and seeds fall to the ground that can attract smaller mammals - a food source for coyotes.

-Keep unattended cats and dogs indoors or in closed runs at night.

- Accompany your leashed pet outside.

- Yell, clap hands, blow a whistle and make yourself look larger if you have a close encounter with a coyote.

Nighttrek Report: What to See in the March Sky

By Neill Simmons

March brings a special event on Saturday the 16th at 11 am. The Woodland Hills Library will host a special talk on the upcoming "Total Solar Eclipse," which will happen on April 8. The presentation will also review what is going on in the night sky. Head Librarian, Patty Miranda will be there to hand out free ISO Certified Solar Eclipse Viewing Glasses to those who attend. Kids are welcome. This is a free event.

The highlight of March occurs on Sunday, the 24th, just after darkness falls. The swift planet Mercury will be at its highest point in the west. It will be a small point of light which is very bright about 20 degrees above the horizon. Make sure to see this. Binoculars will help you spot it. One of our favorite fun facts is that a year on Mercury is 88 of our days! This is because Mercury has a small orbit to travel around the sun.

One way our ancestors knew spring was coming is that they watched the "Big Dipper" in the north. When the Big Dipper was standing on its handle, the planting season was near. The seven star pattern had many names from cultures around her world, but "The Big Bear," or Ursa Major, was used often.

In March, the great constellations of the winter sky appear to jump to the western half of the night sky. Sirius, the brightest star in the night, was low in the east in February and now is high in the south in March. Orion, the mighty hunter constellation, is now in the west. Below the Orion, we can see the famous "Pleiades," also known as the "Seven Sisters."

At this time the king of planets, Jupiter, is a beacon in the west. Jupiter is the fifth planet from our Sun and is, by far, the largest planet in our solar system – more than twice as massive as all the other planets combined! Currently, NASA and JPL are working on the "Europa Clipper" which is a ship that will travel to one of Jupiter's moons, Europa. The mission is to penetrate Europa's ice surface and find the ocean beneath and search out possible life forms.

During March 12, 13, and 14, the beautiful, thin crescent Moon will be back in the low night sky and near the bright planet Jupiter which is a great sight!

Monday, March 25, brings us the famous "Full Worm Moon." This full Moon was known by native Indian tribes as a sign that spring was coming. They noticed earthworms would reappear at this time in the dirt. After 10 pm a "penumbral lunar eclipse" starts. A penumbral eclipse occurs when the Sun, Earth, and the Moon are imperfectly aligned. The Moon will only get slightly darker. After midnight the Moon will be partially covered.

The Woodland Hills Library will host a special talk on March 16 about the upcoming "Total Solar Eclipse."

DAWN PATROL: The bright planet, Venus, will make its curtain call in March. It will be easy to spot at 5:35 am until 6:10 am. Then it will go behind the Sun and disappear. In August, Venus will return to the evening sky.

Vandenberg SFB has been launching many rockets in the northwest each month. Frequently, the launch times and dates change at the last minute. Check their website for updated information.

If you are traveling to Las Vegas, make sure to drive by the "Sphere." It is a new 20,000-seat entertainment arena that was constructed for $2.3 billion! To drive by and view the outside, ever-changing light show is free. Very often the planets are realistically highlighted. It is a lot easier to see Jupiter projected on the "Sphere" than it is to hitch a ride on the "Europa Clipper!"
