News in Brief

Amazon Fresh Woodland Hills Closing

Amazon corporate has announced they are closing all their Amazon Fresh and Amazon Go stores nationwide, including four here in the Valley. The Amazon Fresh at 6245 Topanga Canyon Blvd. will close, as well Amazon Fresh stores in Encino, Northridge and North Hollywood. They already had closed the Amazon Go store at the corner of Topanga Canyon Blvd. and Ventura Blvd. early in 2025. "While we've seen encouraging signals in our Amazon-branded physical grocery stores, we haven't yet created a truly distinctive customer experience with the right economic model needed for large-scale expansion," reads a statement from Amazon. "After a careful evaluation of the business and how we can best serve customers, we've made the difficult decision to close our Amazon Go and Amazon Fresh physical stores, converting various locations into Whole Foods Market stores." The future of the Woodland Hills Amazon Fresh is unclear, as there is already a Whole Foods Market at Canoga Avenue and Ventura Blvd.

Series of Armed Robberies at Commons Under Investigation

Two armed robberies at The Commons at Calabasas and a similar robbery in Westlake Village are under investigation. The three incidents occurred in the last two weeks. Valley News Group reported last week that a woman was robbed at gunpoint and pistol whipped in the face on January 13. The second incident took place Wednesday night involving a suspect armed with a semi-automatic weapon. Both robberies took place at approximately 7:30 pm. The suspects are demanding the women hand over the luxury purses the women were carrying or had in their car. "They definitely strike fear into our victims," said LASD Capt. Dustin Carr. "These are armed robberies. They're very serious crimes, and it's, you know, a very frightening situation right now that's occurring in the Lost Hills jurisdiction. It does appear that they are targeting this area, whether it's due to affluency or economics, we're unsure of a motivation at this point." Lost Hills sheriffs are urging residents to be aware and take precautions when shopping at night. "At this point, the suspects are at large, and so anything you can do to make yourself safer, I would take those precautions at this point, until we get these suspects apprehended," Carr said. "Walking in pairs is a good idea. When you walk in pairs, you lower the chance of you becoming a target of these crimes of opportunity."

Metro Approves Subway Between Valley and Westside

The LA Metro board last week approved a heavy rail subway line for the Sepulveda Corridor, targeting the congested traffic corridor along the 405 freeway. The new line will run from Van Nuys to the Expo/Sepulveda Station, cutting travel from up to 80 minutes by car to under 20 minutes.

The subway will cover 13 miles, with tunnels reaching depths of 500 feet beneath the mountains. It promises a direct connection from the Valley to the Westside through Sherman Oaks, Bel-Air, and UCLA.

This plan from Metro's planning and programming committee last week, would go from Van Nuys to Sherman Oaks, pass under the mountains and Bel-Air, stop at UCLA and ultimately end at the E Line's Expo/Sepulveda Station.

The Sepulveda Pass and plans to improve traffic have been under discussion for decades, The Times' Colleen Shalby wrote. Ethan Elkind, a rail expert and director of the climate program at the Center for Law, Energy and the Environment at UC Berkeley, told her that a variety of political and logistical factors have slowed the project's progress: a focus on downtown transit, opposition to high-capacity transit in the San Fernando Valley and geological challenges in the Sepulveda Pass.

"It's a lot of land," Elkind said. "And the more land you have to go through, the more expensive it is, the more logistically challenging it is."

Lindsey Horvath, L.A. County supervisor and Metro board member, said the project would be a historic development for the Los Angeles region, affecting drivers who commute through the Sepulveda Pass along the 405.

PHOTO: UrbanizeLA

Los Angeles City Councilmember Nithya Raman, whose 4th District covers parts of Encino and Sherman Oaks, said that construction for the project would create hundreds of thousands of jobs and that revenue from ridership would help local businesses.

The approved subway will span 13 miles, including tunnels reaching depths of 500 feet beneath the mountains.

"We don't have to accept sitting in traffic as our only choice," she said, "and this is our pathway forward."

The Sherman Oaks Homeowners Association, which previously rejected earlier proposals, supported this new route and design.

The association's vice president Bob Anderson has expressed concerns over funding of the project, as billions of dollars still need to be sourced.

"We still have not heard from Metro how they're going to pay for this thing," Anderson told The Times. "We don't need to know every financial detail, but we do need to know where they're going to get the funding stream that feeds it and how much the financing is going to cost us."

The estimated cost of the project has ballooned since 2016, when Los Angeles County voters approved transit improvements between the Valley and the Westside under Measure M. The subway was originally projected to cost $6 billion, which then turned into $9.4 billion with current estimates as high as $13.8 billion.

Construction of the entire line was originally estimated to be completed in 2033. Metro does not have a timeline for this new proposal, or a date that construction would start.

Metro cited the need for reliance on state, local and federal funding to fill the shortfall and has raised the idea of private-public partnerships — similar to proposals for the state's controversial high-speed rail project.

Currently there is no specific plan for funding what has been approved.

People in the News

At its first regular meeting of 2026, on Jan. 5, the Las Virgenes-Triunfo Joint Powers Authority (JPA) elected Andy Coradeschi, at right, as chair of the JPA Board of Directors, succeeding Leon Shapiro, who began his term as chair in January 2025. Triunfo Water & Sanitation District Chair Carl Jarecky will serve as JPA Vice Chair.

Coradeschi serves as Division 2 director and president of the Las Virgenes Municipal Water District (LVMWD) Board of Directors. Shapiro serves on the JPA Board as a director representing the Triunfo Water and Sanitation District (TWSD).

The JPA was established in 1964 to provide wastewater services for the growing Las Virgenes-Conejo region. In 1972, the JPA put in place one of the area's first recycled water pipeline systems to irrigate public outdoor spaces, including parks and golf courses. In 1994, the JPA built the Rancho Las Virgenes Composting Facility, where biosolids from the Tapia Water Reclamation Facility are converted into free, safe and nutrient-rich compost for the region.

To prepare for long-term challenges facing California's water supply, the JPA is moving steadily forward with the Advanced Water Purification Facility (AWPF) in Agoura Hills, a regional initiative aimed at strengthening resilience to future water shortages. The facility, scheduled to start construction in spring 2026, will provide advanced treatment to recycled water, resulting in water that meets or exceeds drinking water standards.

That long-term vision is reflected in the leadership guiding the project forward.

"As both a ratepayer and the new chair of the Las Virgenes-Triunfo Joint Powers Authority, I am honored to serve," said Chair Coradeschi. "With the construction of this new Pure Water Project Las Virgenes-Triunfo facility, ratepayers will have a local source of water for the first time ever."

The AWPF represents not only a new facility, but the culmination of decades of regional cooperation. After more than 60 years of collaboration between the two organizations, the AWPF will be the largest infrastructure investment in the JPA's history. It follows more than a decade of research and planning, creating a tailored solution to the unique needs of local communities and addressing future challenges. That legacy of partnership remains central to the project's success.

"The Las Virgenes-Triunfo Joint Powers Authority continues to exemplify the power of regional collaboration in addressing our water future," said JPA Vice Chair Carl Jarecky. "Through the partnership between Triunfo Water and Sanitation District and Las Virgenes Municipal Water District, we are making significant strides on the Pure Water Project, a transformational initiative that will enhance water independence and sustainability for generations to come."

On Saturday, January 24, the West Valley Warner Center Chamber of Commerce held their Annual Health and Wellness Expo at the Westfield Community Center. The event was chaired by Diana Williams, CEO of West Valley Warner Center Chamber of Commerce and Susan Roberts, Ambassador for the West Valley Warner Center Chamber of Commerce. There were over 30 exhibitors, speakers with great presentations and a fun atmosphere for all types of business that serve the health and wellness category.

Informative guest speakers included UCLA Health's Robbie Gluckson, Carbon Health's Matthew Mayer, Dr. Vaziri of Dr. V. Weight and Pain Management, Gwen Bernardo of Performance Myofascial Release and Teen Therapy Centers.

• My father in law used to collect factoids. For instance, when a certain cemetery was too small to handle any more bodies, grave diggers would dig up coffins and re-use the grave. They noticed, however, that one out of 25 coffins were found to have scratch marks on the inside. So, realizing they might be burying people still alive, they would tie a string on the wrist of the corpse, lead it through the coffin, up through the ground and tie it to a bell. Someone would have to sit in the graveyard all night (hence the term "graveyard shift") to listen for the bell, so one could be "saved by the bell" or be considered a "dead ringer." So now you know.

Guest Editorial:

AI Shouldn't Replace the People Who Built This Country

Artificial Intelligence is moving faster than the government, faster than schools, faster than the job market—and honestly, faster than most families can keep up with.

But here's the truth: AI itself isn't the enemy.

AI is a tool. And like every tool in human history, it can be used to build opportunity—or to consolidate power.

Right now, we are standing at a crossroads.

AI has the potential to create something America hasn't seen in generations: a true leveling of the playing field. A student with a laptop, a creator with no budget, or a small business owner with limited resources could suddenly access capabilities once reserved for billion-dollar corporations and Hollywood studios. AI can help people produce professional-quality content, automate time-consuming tasks, and turn ideas into reality faster than ever before.

In other words, AI could be the greatest opportunity engine of our lifetime.

However, it could also become the greatest wealth-extraction machine we've ever seen.

Because without rules, without standards, and without accountability, AI won't empower everyday people. It will replace them. It will undercut them. It will exploit their work while giving them nothing in return.

We've already seen how this movie ends.

Big platforms promise "access," but then monetize attention while pushing workers to the margins. The gig economy promised flexibility, but often delivered instability. Social media promised community, but became a battleground of algorithms, addiction, and manipulation.

Now AI is being sold as another miracle.

But unless we establish guardrails, the profits will flow to the top—while the costs fall on everyone else: workers, artists, educators, small businesses, and families.

AI is a tool. And like every tool in human history, it can be used to build opportunity—or to consolidate power.

We need to say something clearly: innovation should not come at the expense of human dignity.

That means we must protect the rights of the people whose labor and creativity make the economy run. If AI is trained on a person's work, they deserve to know. If their voice, face, writing, or art is used, they deserve consent. If companies profit from human-created content, the people who created it deserve a fair share—not crumbs.

And this isn't just about Hollywood or the tech industry. It's about every profession.

When AI gets used in hiring decisions, we need transparency and safeguards against discrimination. When AI enters classrooms, we need standards that protect learning, not weaken it.

When AI impacts public safety, we need accountability—because "the algorithm did it" is not an excuse.

Most of all, we need leadership that understands both realities at once:

AI can be good. And AI can be dangerous.

The challenge isn't stopping the future. The challenge is shaping it so it works for people—not the other way around.

That's why this conversation can't be limited to corporate boardrooms or political insiders. The people most affected must have a voice: workers, creators, small business owners, educators, parents, and young people who are going to inherit whatever we choose to build.

This moment demands common sense and courage.

We can either build a future where AI increases opportunity for everyone—or we can sleepwalk into a world where power concentrates even further, while regular people are asked to adapt, accept less, and stay quiet.

I'm not interested in staying quiet.

The future is coming whether we're ready or not.

The question is: Will it be built for the people—or for the powerful?

2026 Outlook: Three Ways to Win in Business When the Rules Are Changing

Unprecedented. That's the consensus for the 2025 economy.

Business leaders navigated supply chain challenges, geopolitical tensions, technology disruptions, economic uncertainty and government shutdown. It's natural they look toward 2026 with concern.

According to Wells Fargo Commercial Banking, having weathered 2025 affords an opportunity for decision-makers who prioritize resilience, innovation and talent development.

Here are three ways your business can tap into 2026 opportunities:

1. Stress Test

While the goal should always be to increase resiliency and mitigate weakness, these pursuits should especially be a priority during economic uncertainty. To stay competitive, companies must understand their current strengths and weaknesses and also precisely anticipate opportunities and risks. Conduct a series of best/worst/probable simulations to model budgeting impacts, and stress test your credit facility's structure to ensure they meet potential needs.

Using these insights to drive dynamic cash flow strategies and assess organizational agility can enable your company to respond swiftly by activating strategic, operational and financial levers.

For example, exploring financing options like asset-based lending can help an asset-rich company preserve cash flow and secure working capital, enabling you to make strategic decisions rather than reacting to urgent demands.

For companies seeking to prepare and strategically position themselves, self-evaluation through simulation is not a nice-to-have. It's a must-have.

2. Innovate Intentionally

Innovation — especially through AI and automation — is a priority for more than 70% of commercial businesses nationwide, according to a survey from Bain & Company. McKinsey reports that over 62% are piloting AI agents while 80% are looking to increase efficiency through AI initiatives, according to Deloitte.

Despite this enthusiasm, management that doesn't carefully align innovation investment with operational goals, risks hindering organizational progress.

Without disciplined planning, your company may over-invest in technology while neglecting other critical areas, disrupting balance sheets and employee engagement.

Instead, your firm should deliberately integrate new capabilities without losing sight of your long-term vision.

Further, leaders should evaluate if additional cybersecurity measures or fraud insurance are needed. Regularly consulting with strategic advisors (lawyers, accountants, bankers) who can evaluate progress and provide expertise can help you mitigate this risk.

3. Empower Talent

Despite deliberate and thoughtful strategies, if business leaders fail to engage employees and prioritize talent development, long-term productivity and adaptability could be at risk. Tools and preparedness research are only effective if people remain central to strategy.

A Society for Human Resource Management study finds that organizations that invest in talent see reduced turnover. This investment also has a real dollar return; McKinsey reports that human capital development drives revenue and better integration of technology — which is especially important as AI applications increase.

Companies with training programs generate more income per employee and enjoy 24% higher profit margins, according to IDC research.

Economic uncertainty may tempt leaders to deprioritize employee development, but with tech adoption, productivity and retention at stake, it's more critical than ever.

Hamnet is a Visceral Tale of Grief and the Importance of Art to Heal

By Katie Sterling

In a movie whose title references Shakespeare's most famous work, the narrative seemingly has very little focus on the playwright himself. Rather, it delves into the largely unknown story of his son, who died young, and a mother attempting to live after grief. Hamnet, based on the bestselling book by Maggie O'Farrell, is a tragic tale of loss and how a true-life tragedy served to beget the classic tragedy told on stage.

William Shakespeare (Paul Mescal) is working as a village tutor when he meets and becomes quickly beguiled by Agnes (Jessie Buckley). As the daughter of a forest witch, she is a gifted healer who prefers to spend her time in the woods. It's her connection to nature that encapsulates the largely ethereal aesthetic of the film and for almost the entire first half, audiences feel as if they are watching a sort of fable play out on screen. It's a quiet introduction into this world, with director Chloe Zhao integrating long stretches of screen time solely focusing on the whistling wind in the trees or a lone hawk soaring through an expansive sky. It's at times enchanting, but also oddly eerie as you know the narrative will soon turn dark.

Academy Award-nominee Jessie Buckley (center).

After a whirlwind romance, Agnes and Will have married and become parents to three children, a daughter named Susanna (Bodhi Rae Breathnach) and then subsequently twins, Hamnet (Jacobi Jupe) and Judith (Olivia Lynes). During this time, Will has become more focused on his playwriting, frequently spending time in London to get his plays on stage as his popularity is growing. Back home in the countryside, Agnes is installing her love of nature upon her children, her sense of mysticism seemingly rubbing off of them. After all, as twins, Hamnet and Judith have a sense of telepathy that only those who shared a womb can. They are exceptionally close and often disguising as each other in an attempt to trick those around them for a giggle that only eleven-year-olds can truly delight in. As the film climaxes to the inevitable death of Hamnet, it's apparent that the bliss this little family finds comfort in will soon shatter.

The death of the young boy is perhaps the most impactful moment of the movie, both beautifully filmed and exceptionally tragic. It presents itself in an almost dreamlike state until the moment is broken as Agnes comes to the realization of what has happened and lets out an animalistic howl that only a bereft mother could. The loss is all-encompassing, made even worse by the fact that Will is away in London when it occurs. Upon his return, he is shocked to discover the loss of his child and the shadows in which Agnes has retreated into.

As typical following the death of a child, the parents grow farther apart, each grappling with grief in their own ways. Agnes becomes angry and Will retreats into his work, a choice that infuriates Agnes since it seems to her that he is simply moving on with life. Little does she know that Will is using his playwriting as an outlet for his grief and that Hamlet (often interchangeable with the word Hamnet) is his way of making sense of his personal tragedy. At the film's climax, the message is clear that art can serve as a powerful tool for healing, something that Agnes begins to understand when she first witnesses his play.

Much like Shakespeare's works, Hamnet is not an easily digestible film on the surface, but one that is layered with meaning and interpretation. It is at times a story of love, of grief, of spirituality and of art. Jacobi Jupe as young Hamnet encompasses a sense of innocence so pure that when he selflessly tries to offer himself in replacement of his sick sister, you can't help but ache for him. Jessie Buckley transforms from a quiet wanderer of the woods to a mother so torn by grief, her performance as the narrative escalates is so impactful, audiences feel her anger and her sadness in their guts. This may be a film whose title is tied to Shakespeare, but make no mistake, this is Agnes' movie and Buckley seamlessly and beautifully portrays a mother crippled by loss. Hamnet is tragic in a myriad of ways, but it also serves as a gentle reminder that healing can be found in unexpected ways.

Dignity Health Stops Human Trafficking in its Tracks

As January marks Human Trafficking Awareness Month in the U.S., Dignity Health is underscoring its unwavering commitment to combating human trafficking and supporting survivors with dignity and compassion across California, a state that consistently reports one of the highest rates of this pervasive issue.

Newly released data offers critical insights into the scope and dynamics of trafficking within the state and highlights Dignity Health's pivotal role in intervention.

Dignity Health's Impact:

Across its hospitals in Arizona, California, and Nevada, Dignity Health identified potential signs of human trafficking in nearly 30,000 patient screenings and social work assessments. This translates to over 80 potential victims identified daily. Crucially, more than three-quarters of these detections occurred in common hospital areas like emergency rooms, demonstrating that healthcare settings often serve as the only safe touchpoint for victims.

California's Enduring Challenge:

Between 2015 and 2021, California experienced a disproportionate rise in human trafficking cases. In 2015, the state accounted for a significant 18% of all trafficking cases and 15% of all trafficked individuals in the U.S. While the state's share of national cases has since decreased slightly, California continues to lead the U.S. in human trafficking reports.

Prevalence of Sex Trafficking:

The majority of trafficking in California (89% by 2021) is sex trafficking, frequently occurring in locations such as illicit massage parlors and hotels. Labor trafficking also persists, often in private residences, though these victims are even more challenging to identify and assist. From 2015 to 2021, the percentage of human trafficking cases involving sex trafficking increased from 87% to 89% in California.

Dignity Health's comprehensive initiatives include specialized training for healthcare providers to recognize the subtle indicators of trafficking, strategic partnerships with local organizations to provide essential support services, and survivor-centered programs that prioritize holistic healing.

Dignity Health - Northridge Hospital Medical Center (NHMC) actively participates in the 24-hour/7-day per-week Sexual Assault Response Team (SART) program in the San Fernando and Santa Clarita Valleys, offering crucial support for sexually and domestically abused women and children through its Center for Assault Treatment Services (CATS).

Northridge Hospital actively participates in the 24/7 Sexual Assault Response Team and Center for Assault Treatment Services.

The CATS program provides forensic medical evidentiary examinations and interviews in a safe and supportive environment and has assisted over 22,684 children and adults affected by interpersonal violence since 1997. Services are provided free of charge to victims 24/7 365 days a year.

"Guided by our mission of compassion and respect for human dignity, we are committed to supporting survivors with the care and resources they deserve," said Jeremy Zoch, President and CEO at NHMC.

Through these dedicated efforts, Dignity Health is actively contributing to building stronger, safer communities, reaffirming its commitment to treating every patient with respect and compassion.

How to Live to Be 100 - Seven Healthy Living Tips

Living to 100 may sound extraordinary, but research suggests it's more achievable—and enjoyable—than many people think. Studies show the majority of centenarians rate their health as good, and large numbers of people in this age group are mobile, active and optimistic.

According to the American Medical Association, adopting these seven habits can improve longevity and quality of life:

1. Eat healthy. Think of food as medicine. Choose nutritious, whole foods. Eat more fruits that are dark in color — blue, purple and red — to get the most nutrients, as well as fiber-rich vegetables, especially non-starchy vegetables such as broccoli, carrots and leafy greens. Incorporate whole grains, nuts, seeds, lean meats and fish. Drink more water, or as an alternative, flavored or sparkling water with no added sugar.

Reduce your intake of sugar-sweetened beverages and unhealthy ultra-processed foods, especially those with added sodium and sugar. Drinking sugary beverages, even 100% fruit juices, is associated with a higher mortality risk, according to a study published in JAMA Network Open. Eat fewer processed meats, which tend to be high in fat and heavy on added salt and preservatives. Limit your intake of refined grains, such as breads, crackers, baked goods and white rice. Drink less alcohol.

2. Exercise. Adults should aim for at least 150 minutes of moderate-intensity activity or 75 minutes of vigorous-intensity activity weekly. A recent study published in JAMA found that putting down the television remote and walking can improve healthy aging — highlighting the importance of small everyday habits.

3. Get enough sleep. Adequate sleep improves memory, reduces stress, improves mood, and primes the body's natural defenses against disease. But sleep quality decreases with age. Improve your sleep quality by setting a regular bedtime and wake-up time, insulating your bedroom against noise, avoiding exercise within an hour of bedtime, maintaining a cool and dark bedroom, and limiting fluids within two hours of bedtime. Also avoid alcohol before bedtime and make your bedroom a tech-free zone as screen-time can impact your ability to fall asleep and stay asleep.

4. Live with purpose. A sense of purpose can lead to increased energy, motivation, emotional stability and resilience. Take time for self-reflection and try meditation or yoga. Prioritize your values and beliefs and put them into action toward a goal that's meaningful to you and benefits others.

5. Stay positive. To bust stress, take a break from decisions, connect with others, pet your dog or cat, write a to-do list (stick to three items), take time to recharge, laugh, sing, curb clutter, set boundaries, perform mindfulness exercises, practice gratitude, and seek help from a professional when stress becomes overwhelming.

6. Stay connected. Research shows that having social connections is a significant predictor of longevity and better physical, cognitive and mental health, while social isolation and loneliness are significant predictors of premature death and poor health. Unfortunately, there is a nationwide loneliness epidemic that medical experts consider a major public health concern. Combat loneliness with social clubs and community groups, or by taking up a hobby, learning something new or volunteering. If you're struggling with loneliness, reach out to a professional, your doctor, family member or friend. You can also call the 988 crisis helpline for support.

Putting down the television remote and walking can improve healthy aging.

7. Get screened. Schedule preventive care, tests and health screenings to help your doctor spot certain conditions before they become more serious. Your doctor can recommend needed tests based on your age, gender and health conditions — including colonoscopies, mammograms, gynecological and prostate exams, and vision screenings.

Today, there are many at-home screening options available. Some are more effective than others, and all work best – and minimize stress around results – when taken in consultation with a doctor.

For more resources on staying healthy, visit ama-assn.org.

"Everyone strives to live longer, but the goal should be to live as healthy as possible for as long as we live," says AMA CEO John Whyte, MD, MPH. "Simple steps today – eating well, staying active, sleeping enough, and seeing your doctor – can add quality years, or even decades, to your life."

After Another Aliso Canyon Gas Leak Brad Sherman Calls for Closure

Southern California Gas Company reported that on January 27 at 7 am a safety valve on an aboveground pipeline at the Aliso Canyon natural gas facility activated, temporarily venting natural gas into the atmosphere.

The safety valve was activated by ice - called hydrates - in a pipeline at the facility.

The release of natural gas lasted approximately 25 minutes and was safely stopped by operators at the field.

Nearby residents reported to the Gas Company they smelled a natural gas odor which dissipated once the venting stopped.

Congressman Brad Sherman addressed the leak, saying, "I have been fighting to close this natural gas storage facility down. Southern California Gas Company has refused to even try to develop a natural gas delivery system that is not dependent upon Aliso Canyon.

The California Public Utilities Commission has refused to require the development of a plan to shut Aliso Canyon down while continuing to provide natural gas service to the residents of Los Angeles County.

We have no idea whether today's gas leak was more significant than described by Southern California Gas Company. But we know that today's gas leak shows that it is long past time to shut it down."

The Aliso Canyon plant of Southern California Gas.

Sherman's concerns stem from the October 23, 2015 gas leak at the same facility.

It was the largest gas blowout in the history of the United States. It was estimated that 109,000 metric tons of methane was released from Aliso Canyon Well SS-25 until it was sealed 111 days later on February 11, 2016. So Cal Gas paid out over $2 billion in settlements and fines.

Operators at the plant are currently inspecting the impacted pipeline and will remove any remaining hydrates and make any needed repairs. No additional venting is anticipated.

Court Rules in Favor of Boeing in Santa Susana Field Lab Cleanup

Residents fearing contamination and cancer risk for themselves and future generations from the Santa Susana Field Lab filed a lawsuit against Boeing and the Department of Toxic Substances.

On January 8, the court rejected their petition challenging a prior cleanup agreement for the site.

P.arents Against Santa Susana Field Lab, Physicians for Social Responsibility-Los Angeles and Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility claimed that a 2022 agreement between Boeing and The Department of Toxic Substances precluded a full environmental review from CEQA (the California Environmental Quality Act).

They refer to some studies that show a greater increase in cancer among the 700,000 residents living directly below the site, though causation has not been proven. They argue that the site has never been fully cleared, and that the 2022 agreement will leave significant amounts of contamination on site.

The Santa Susana Field Lab is a highly controversial toxic site. In the 1950's and 60's it was used for rocket engine testing and nuclear research, leaving radioactive and hazardous material behind. In 1959 the sodium nuclear reactor had the first meltdown of a core reactor in history. For years the community has called for intensive cleanup.

The 2,850-acre lab is owned 80% by Boeing and the rest by NASA and the Department of Energy. The Department of Toxic Substances and the Environmental Protection Agency are responsible for the

The lawsuit focused on the area of the site that Boeing is responsible for, and claimed that the 2022 agreement did not require soil cleanup mandated to a residential standard and was negotiated before a full CEQA review.

It cited the 2008 Supreme Court caseSaveTara, which ruled officials violated CEQA by approved elements of a West Hollywood housing project before the official review was finished. The ruling stated that agencies cannot commit to actions or alternatives before a full CEQA review is finished.

The January court ruling in the SSFL lawsuit said that the Save Tara argument was not applicable as the two cases were different.

Plaintiffs in the SSFL lawsuit allege that the 2022 agreement will allow Boeing to leave 90 to 95% of contaminants on the site. Denise Duffield, Associate Director of Physicians for Social Responsibility, said, "The agreement was negotiated privately , without public input or representation of the community's interests. It breaks prior promises for a safe and complete cleanup." The plaintiffs have vowed to continue fighting the court ruling.
